Vegetable Seed Longevity Chart

Fri, 01/24/2014 - 10:36 -- Roger Doiron

Wondering if you can get by using some of last year's seeds? The short answer is "maybe." For a more in-depth answer, check out this helpful chart produced by Colorado State University. See the column on the far right for seed longevity. Of all the seeds I've planted, I've found that parsnip seeds are the least viable after a year or more.
