

CHEN GARDENERS INTERNATIONAL

International (<http://kgi.org>)

Backyard Chickens

Heirloom Gardening for Backyard Chickens

Sat, 03/03/2012 - 16:23 -- Terroir Seeds

Raising backyard chickens is becoming increasingly popular, no matter where you live. There have always been rural chickens, but now there are small and large city chickens, happily living in coops and backyards all across the country. Chickens can do a lot for you, both in the garden and in the kitchen. First off, they give you a real measure of food security and increase your resiliency. The eggs are a great bartering tool, as very few folks that we've talked to weren't interested in some fresh home-raised eggs. Chickens are great for bug control, light soil tilling and fertilization. The chicken manure is very high in Nitrogen and is a great addition to your compost. Home raised eggs are some of the highest nutritional content of any chickens, including free-range. The reason is that most home raised chickens are pampered and given extra nutrition and care. It is very easy to provide a highly nutritious and healthy diet for your backyard chickens from your home garden. We will look at several heirloom vegetables, herbs and flowers that you can easily grow in your garden that will not only provide some tasty treats for your chickens, but give you some great greens as well.

Read the rest of "Heirloom Gardening for Backyard Chickens [1]".

Stephen Scott is co-owner of Terroir Seeds [2], a family owned and operated heirloom seed company that focuses on the "Cycle of Terroir"- from the soil, to the seed, to the food you eat, providing heirloom seeds, education and information for all phases of the cycle.

Image (optional):

Group content visibility:
Use group defaults

Source URL: <http://kgi.org/blogs/terroir-seeds/heirloom-gardening-backyard-chickens>

Links:

- [1] <http://www.underwoodgardens.com/2017/heirloom-gardening-for-backyard-chickens/>
- [2] <http://www.underwoodgardens.com/>