

Published on Kitchen Gardeners International (<http://kgi.org>)

Home > How Kitchen Gardeners are Sowing Hope

How Kitchen Gardeners are Sowing Hope

Wed, 06/13/2012 - 16:50 -- Roger Doiron

For gardeners in wealthy countries, it's easy to take for granted the psychological benefits that a garden can offer. In springing from the ground, gardens offer a living metaphor for rebirth and a fresh start. It was for this reason that KGI was so happy to be able to fund the Garden of Hope project in Goa, India. Rather than tell this uplifting story in words, we'll leave it to the presentation below to tell it in pictures. It is, however, worth saying one more thing: this garden was funded by people like you through tax-deductible donations [1], so thank you for supporting KGI.

Image (optional):

Free tags:

India [2]

Topics:

Sow It Forward grantees [3]

Group content visibility:

Use group defaults

Promoted text:

How Kitchen Gardeners are Sowing Hope

Source URL: <http://kgi.org/blog/roger-doiron/how-kitchen-gardeners-are-sowing-hope>

Links:

[1] <http://kgi.org/donate>

[2] <http://kgi.org/free-tags/india>

[3] <http://kgi.org/topics/sow-it-forward-grantees>