

Published on Kitchen Gardeners International (<http://kgi.org>)

Home > WaggleDancer question

WaggleDancer question

Sat, 06/29/2013 - 10:14 -- WaggleDancer

Question:

Due to the wet season, my Bing cherries are starting to develop blue mold.

Group content visibility:

Use group defaults

Question Details (optional):

Any suggestions for organic control of blue mold in pre-harvest cherries to stem the spores from ruining the whole crop? I'll go out today and remove as much of the molded cherries I can see. However, if moisture and humidity continue, I'm at a loss for what to do. I think it'll just take over. The cherries could be picked now, but they're not displaying a nice dark bing colour yet. In Ontario, I see the average date for picking Bing's is July 16. Would love any and all advice!

Source URL: <http://kgi.org/questions/due-wet-season-my-bing-cherries-are-starting-develop-blue-mold>